Medico legal Work Experience

I started undertaking medico legal work in 1993. Since then it was building up and constituted the biggest and on prolonged lengthy occasions the only part of my private practice.

I attended the Cardiff University Bond Solon Expert Witness training for Expert witness Certificate.

I am currently on different medical expert databases and on expert witness panel of many solicitors and medicolegal reporting firms.

I am on different expert witness websites and directories.

I regularly attend medico legal courses and conferences: the latest was Medico-legal expert training, advanced medicolegal courses.

The majority of my reports are produced for personal, road traffic and industrial injury claims including repetitive strains. I have also prepared different types of reports, including to name but a few, complex injuries, sports injuries and negligence cases.

My medico legal work included as a matter of course joint statements, court attendances, and conferences with solicitors and barristers.

Prior to the Wolfe's reforms (now known as CPR35), I prepared claimant and defendant reports. I have always prepared unbiased reports. When these reforms came about, the conversion to independent reporting was natural. I have also prepared single joint expert reports
