Current Appointment:

Clinical Director (Gynaecology).

Consultant Gynaecologist with a special interest in Urogynaecology and Minimally Invasive Surgery at Kings College Hospital, London.

Areas of Expertise :

Urogynaecology, including removal of vaginal mesh.

Laparoscopic Surgery including Severe Endometriosis

Clinical Practice

I am currently a Consultant Gynaecologist working in the department of Urogynaecology at Kings College Hospital London.

I am currently Clinical Director for Gynaecology and director of the Kings College Endometriosis centre.

My private practice is based at London Bridge hospital. I am the director of the London Bridge Endometriosis centre.

Having completed basic training in general obstetrics and gynaecology I undertook a two year period of research in Urogynaecology at Kings College Hospital followed by advanced subspecialty training in Urogynaecology.

I have extensive clinical experience of the management of complex urogynaecological problems and all current diagnostic techniques including Videourodynamic and Ultrasound. I have developed expertise in major pelvic reconstructive surgery and current minimally invasive techniques in Urogynaecology.

In addition I have also had extensive additional training in laparoscopic surgery, both in Urogynaecology and in General Gynaecology.

In particular I have expertise in the laparoscopic management of urogynaecological conditions and in laparoscopic surgery for complex endometriosis

I am the founder and director of both Kings College Hospital and the London Bridge Hospital BSGE accredited centres for treatment of severe endometriosis.

I have run regular practical training sessions and courses in minimally invasive surgery in the UK and Internationally.

I have been a regular member of faculty for UK laparoscopic courses

I personally ran the international advanced laparoscopic skills course at the European Surgical Institute, Hamburg for six years.

I am currently educational supervisor for one of the five nationally awarded RCOG ATSM fellows in advanced laparoscopic surgery for benign gynaecology.
